Mark Wayne Adams
Mark Wayne Adams is an award-winning illustrator, author, and publisher who has illustrated over thirty-two children’s books in the past six years. As a public speaker, he uses his talents to inspire others through reading, writing, and art. He received the annual Marlene M. Helm Alumni Achievement Award for his contribution to the arts and his dedication to enriching Kentucky’s artistic future. Mark resides in Longwood, Florida, with his wife, Angela, his two children, Isabella and Carter, and their dogs, Russell and Libbi.

Tom Angleberger
Tom Angleberger also writes under the pen name Sam Riddleburger. He is the bestselling author of The Strange Case of Origami Yoda, which won the 2010 E. B. White Read Aloud Award for middle readers, Darth Paper Strikes Back, and Horton Halfpott. Tom sez: “I’m not necessarily all that creative. I’m more of a puzzle putter together. I take all these little puzzle pieces — Yoda, middle school problems, Cheetos — and I fuss and fuss with them until I fit them together.” He lives in Christiansburg, Virginia, with his wife, author and illustrator Cece Bell.

Audrey Church
Audrey Church is an Associate Professor of School Library Media at Longwood University in Farmville, Virginia. She is the author of Leverage Your Library Program to Help Raise Test Scores (Linworth, 2003), “The Instructional Role of Library Media Specialists as Perceived by Elementary School Principals” (SLMR, 2008), and “Secondary School Principals’ Perceptions of the School Librarian’s Instructional Role” (SLMR, 2010). She currently serves as the Educators of School Librarians Section representative to the AASL Board of Directors. Sponsored by Kentucky Association of School Librarians.

Richard Paul Evans
Richard Paul Evans is the #1 bestselling author of The Christmas Box. Each of his more than twenty novels has appeared on the New York Times bestseller list; there are more than seventeen million copies of his books in print. His books have been translated into more than twenty-four languages and several have been international bestsellers. He is the winner of the American Mothers Book Award, two first place Storytelling World Awards for his children’s books, and the Romantic Times Best Women’s Novel of the Year Award. Evans received the Washington Times Humanitarian of the Century Award and the Volunteers of America National Empathy Award for his work helping abused children. Evans lives in Salt Lake City, Utah, with his wife, Keri, and their five children.
Becky George
Becky George graduated from Eastern Mennonite University, Harrisonburg, VA in 1983 with a degree in Early Education. After securing a position with the Page County Board of Education she taught for three years. She left teaching to volunteer on a kibbutz in Israel for 7 months. While there she met her husband, Rick George and married in 1991. The couple lived in Florida for several years and during that time she dedicated herself to homeschooling their three children. They moved to West Virginia in 2006 to be closer to family. Becky began working at Craft Memorial Library in 2006 and part-time in the Eastern Regional Coal Archives in 2009. Sponsored by the KLA Special Libraries Section

Jason Griffey
Jason Griffey is an Associate Professor and Head of Library Information Technology at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. His latest book, Mobile Technology and Libraries, is available as a part of Neal Schuman’s Tech Set, the winner of the ALA 2011 Award for the Best Book in Library Literature. He has also written multiple Library Technology Reports for the American Library Association on topics such as personal electronics in the library, privacy, copyright, and intellectual property. Jason was named a Library Journal Mover & Shaker in 2009, and speaks internationally on the future of libraries, mobile technology, eBooks, and other technology related issues. His current obsession is the LibraryBox Project (librarybox.us), a portable digital file distribution system. He can be stalked obsessively at www.jasongriffey.net and Pattern Recognition and is a columnist for the ALA Techsource blog. He spends his free time with his daughter Eliza, reading, obsessing over gadgets, and preparing for the inevitable zombie uprising. Barbara Stripling
Barbara Stripling is the ALA President. In January 2012, she became Assistant Professor of Practice at Syracuse University, where she is teaching library science classes and preparing our next generation of librarians. In May 2011, she earned her doctorate degree from the School of Information Studies, Syracuse University. Barbara came to Syracuse after having served as Director of School Library Services for the 1700 public schools in New York City for seven years. She began her career as a classroom teacher and school librarian in Colorado, North Carolina, and Arkansas. After 20 years in the classroom and library, Barbara became Library Power Director in Chattanooga, Tennessee, where she developed the local Library Power initiative of library revitalization/reform and sustained professional development for librarians. Barbara returned to Fayetteville, Arkansas, in 1998 to become Director of Instructional Services for the school district for four years. In 2002, she moved to New York City to develop and direct the library program at an educational foundation, New Visions for Public Schools, until she took the position at the New York City Department of Education in January 2005.
Frank X. Walker

Walker is a native of Danville, KY., a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and he completed a master of fine arts in writing at Spalding University. He has lectured, conducted workshops, read poetry and exhibited at more than 300 national conferences and universities including the Verbal Arts Centre in Derry, Northern Ireland; Santiago, Cuba; University of California at Berkeley; Notre Dame; Appalachian State University and many more. Governor Steve Beshear appointed Frank X Walker to serve as Kentucky Poet Laureate for the 2013 – 2014 term. As poet laureate, Walker will promote the arts and lead the state in literary endeavors through readings and public presentations at meetings, seminars, conferences and events, including Kentucky Writers’ Day.

OER, CC-BY, LTI, OAI, KYVL. These acronyms can mean less time creating content and more time facilitating learning. Quality instructional resources of multimedia, interactive chunks of content, or entire courses, are available to mash and mix. Join the Kentucky community for crowdsourced content, textbooks, learning objects with taxonomies and build your own repository. It’s not just buzzwords. KYVL has licensed, open and curated connections to other state repositories and the best of CC. The workshop will provide a broad overview of major OER themes and partners as well as hands on “how to” mix and mash digital content.

1:00 – 4:00 pm
Collaborate and Communicate to Ensure the Community Values Your Library – Preconference II
Maureen Sullivan, ALA Past President

ALA Past-President Maureen Sullivan will lead this discussion to focus on what library leaders can do to build community support for libraries. Among the topics will be how to convey the library’s value, how to identify and engage key stakeholders, how to lead in your community and what to do when faced with a challenge or threat. She will offer her ideas for practical strategies and will engage participants in a lively discussion of how to apply the strategies in their own situations.

Meet Frank X. Walker, the 2013-2014 Kentucky Poet Laureate. Walker, a Danville native, is the author of five collections of poetry and is an established playwright. An associate professor in the University of Kentucky’s department of English, he is also the director of the African-American and Africana studies program and the head of the Affrilachian Poets movement.

9:00-9:50 am
Libraries in the Post-PC Future
*Jason Griffey
University of Tennessee at Chattanooga*

The technological changes coming over the next 5-10 years are likely to be so transformative that we (libraries and librarians) need to be thinking now, hard, about how we prepare for them. How do libraries continue to measure our value when our historical measurements become useless? How will the continued and unavoidable drop in price, increase in processing, and lessening of power consumption of hardware be useful for libraries? How does true computing ubiquity change our world? These and other questions about the future of the library will be discussed during this presentation...come with your thinking caps on.

Google Books, Project Guttenberg, Internet Archive, HathiTrust, Perseus: What’s the Difference and Why Should You Care?
*Sue Finley
Ekstrom Library, University of Louisville
Allen B. Ashman
Ekstrom Library, University of Louisville*

Google Books, Project Guttenberg, Internet Archive, and HathiTrust are popular sites for accessing digitized, full-text, public domain monographs. Their strengths and weaknesses will be explored from librarian and patron perspectives. Less well known special collections of free online books will also be examined, including Kentucky Digital Library, Cincinnati’s Virtual Library, Tufts University’s Perseus Digital Library of Greco-Roman Classics, and Cornell University’s Home Economics Archive.
Morehead State University has a required First Year Seminar class that combines the traditional “how to succeed at university life” with the rigor and content of upper level discipline specific classes. The Camden-Carroll Library acquired buy in from the organizers to require a library session. In fall 2012 we achieved 100% success in teaching at least 1 session for every FYS. We will share how we became involved, what we teach, and evaluate our involvement with the program.

Better than Google: Research Portals for KY Professionals
Betsy Hughes
KY Virtual Library
Brad Marcum
Eastern Kentucky University

Academic librarians teach students to use resources and services tied to their particular institutions. What happens to graduates once they join the workforce and need to perform research? Public libraries are often tasked with re-teaching these professionals as they struggle with their research, bereft of the resources they were trained to use in college. In this session, librarians from KYVL and EKU discuss a cooperative project to create portals aimed at assisting these working professionals.

Piecing Together History: Using Crowdsourcing to Connect Communities to Their Past
Jennifer Duplaga, Manuscripts Curator
Kentucky Historical Society
Cheri Daniels, Senior Librarian/Reference Specialist
Kentucky Historical Society

The Kentucky Historical Society recently launched a series of crowdsourcing events designed to enrich our understanding of the communities connected to our collections. Through physical and digital initiatives, groups and individuals were invited to share their knowledge of people, places and events. This session will explore our information gathering strategies, Digital Catalog metadata development, and how we took collections on the road to glean the far reaching depths of community knowledge.

Creating A School Library Media Center in Rural Jordan
Valerie Viers
Louisville Free Public Library

As a Peace Corps volunteer, Valerie Viers developed the library of a girls’ school in her rural Jordanian village into a school library media center. The library went from repository for books to a media center with audio-visual capabilities and internet access. Viers will discuss unique cultural challenges she faced while getting the project off the ground and how the new space changed the experience of teaching and learning at the school.

10:00 – 10:50 am
General Session: Whose Life Will You Change Today?
Barbara Stripling
ALA President

As librarians, we must listen to the voices of our community members. What are their aspirations and challenges? Libraries of all types across the country are transforming their programs, collections, and services to meet the priorities of the communities they serve and become centers of conversation, community engagement, literacy, learning, and innovation. Barbara Stripling’s 2013-2014 ALA presidential initiative, Libraries Change Lives, is framed around these areas of transformative practice as, together, we answer the question, “Whose life will you change today?”

I Like to Read...How Can I Get on Your Board
Helen Williams
Rowan County Public Library
Debbie Cosper
Boyd County Public Library

Has this ever happened to you? Do your prospective trustees actually know what is expected of them? How are you currently recruiting Library Trustees to serve on your library board? Because public libraries are continued targets of public scrutiny, it is important to choose well and create a process that is professional and thorough. We will take you through that process from beginning to end.
Digging into Coal History in Southern West Virginia
Becky George
Craft Memorial Library

The discovery of coal in our region brought about the development of the railroad and industry. With the arrival of the railroads hundreds of new mines were opened and coal mining communities were developed. The boom in the coal industry brought about a need for workers. Many immigrants were recruited to work in the mines. The discussion will include some of the early entrepreneurs in the coal and railroad industry, as well as the development and characteristics of life in the coal communities in the Pocahontas Coalfield of southern West Virginia.

Does size really matter? Active learning in any classroom
Lisa Nichols
Transylvania University
Debbie Sharp
University of Kentucky

Active learning is the best way to engage students during your instruction sessions yet many librarians shy away from it citing challenges such as noise level, control, space limitations, or performance anxiety. We believe prompting your students to become actively involved in their own learning is well worth the effort. Two instruction librarians hope to help assuage your fears by presenting practical tips and tricks anyone can use in the classroom, whether you teach groups of 12 or 112.

Strategic Planning One Bite at a Time
Martha White, Library Consultant
Gracey, KY

If you have been avoiding the whole thing, this is the session for you. While it can feel overwhelming, come and learn how to divide the work into manageable chunks. We’ll talk about focus groups, SWOTs, benchmarking, and other preliminary steps that all lead up to developing a plan. Whether you are using a consultant or doing the whole thing yourself, this can take some of the mystery (and fear) out of the process.

Information Consultancy Rediscovering our Audience
E. Michael Wilson
University of Louisville

In this new information age recent studies reveal a decline in the need for libraries. Libraries need to be nimble in adapting to change. Library liaisons work with a large variety of users and are often the face of the library. The integration of business consultancy skills with information consultancy can help library liaisons discover, strengthen, and build the connections needed to thrive in this new environment.

¿A dónde vas, bibliotecario? A Kentucky Librarian Goes to Cuba
Kevin Murphy
Southeast Kentucky Community and Technical College

KCTCS librarian Kevin Murphy took advantage of easing travel restrictions vis’a-vis Cuba to join a bibliographic tour there. He attended the International Book Fair of Havana, met with Cuban librarians, archivists, and curators at the University of Havana, the Cuban National Library, the Jose Marti Museum, and the Cuban National Literacy Museum, while also attending a meeting of the Cuban Librarian Association. Murphy will wrap up by discussing the process of traveling legally to Cuba.

Bringing Investors Back to your Library
Lisa O’Connor
University of Kentucky School of Library & Information Science

The onus for retirement savings is increasingly on the shoulders of individual investors. Additionally, the number of online brokerage accounts has increased a hundred times in the past decade, so investors often forego expert advice, taking a DIY approach. Many investors have abandoned the library, believing they can find what they need online. This program discusses what is known about investors’ information behavior and outlines the sources and services they most need from their libraries.

12:00 – 2:00 pm
AWARDS LUNCHEON
Richard Paul Evans

When Richard Paul Evans wrote the #1 best-seller, The Christmas Box, he never intended on becoming an internationally known author. The story was written as an expression of love for his then two young daughters. Three years later, this quiet, simple story of parental love and the true meaning of Christmas made history when it became simultaneously the #1 hardcover and paperback book in the nation. Since then, more than eight million copies of The Christmas Box have been printed. Four of Evans’s books were produced into television movies and have starred such well-known actors as Maureen O’Hara, Richard Thomas, Rob Lowe, Christopher Lloyd, James Earl Jones, Naomi Watts and Academy award winners Vanessa Redgrave and Ellen Burstyn. He has since written 18 consecutive New York Times bestsellers and is one of the few authors in history to have hit both the fiction and non-fiction bestseller lists. There are currently more than 14 million copies of his books in print, including the Michael Vey series.

2:00 – 2:50 pm
Mobile Technology for Libraries
Jason Griffey
University of Tennessee at Chattanooga
Sponsored by the Kentucky Public Libraries Association & KLA Academic Libraries Section

Worldwide, the majority of people who have access to the Internet are not using a computer. They are relying on mobile devices as their primary interface for listening to music, watching television, reading books, communicating with friends, and finding answers to questions. The mobile phone has become, over the last 10 years, the method by which people interact with information around the world. As phones become more and more capable, fewer and fewer people find that they need their computer on a day to day basis to stay in touch with their infosphere. Libraries need to be informed about these changes, as well as looking forward and preparing for the future of information interaction. This presentation will examine the current state of the mobile world and why it’s important to libraries and suggest ways in which libraries can be active participants in the mobile revolution.

1:00 - 5:00 pm
Exhibit Hall Open

There’s an App for That! Or Is There?
Emily Krug
Somerset Community College Learning Commons

The rise of tablet computing and the advent of mobile apps are changing the way we interact with technology. The library profession should be embracing these changes. One way this could be done is through the creation of mobile apps—not only for our users, but also for ourselves. This session will examine existing apps for librarians and will include a discussion of how librarians, particularly catalogers and other technical services librarians, might use apps in a daily workflow.

RDA in the Commonwealth: A Panel Discussion
William Shrout
KY Dept for Libraries and Archives
Cathy Crum
KY Dept for Libraries and Archives
Alicia McGrath
KY Dept for Libraries and Archives

A panel of technical services staff from Kentucky public libraries will discuss their efforts at moving to the new descriptive cataloging rules, Resource Description and Access (RDA). The discussion will focus broadly on training and implementation of the new rules, recent developments, and emerging best practices.
From “The Walking Dead” to “Warm Bodies”: Incorporating Team Based Learning in a One-Shot Session
Cindy Judd
Eastern Kentucky University Libraries
Trenia Napier
Eastern Kentucky University Libraries
Ashley Cole
Eastern Kentucky University Libraries

Inspired by the use of team-based learning in semester-long courses, the presenters modified TBL strategies for one-shot instruction sessions. By shifting responsibility from instructor to student, we encourage students to develop critical and creative thinking skills in order to meet their information needs. This workshop-style presentation will demonstrate how we facilitate sessions and share outlines and lessons learned from incorporating TBL techniques across diverse disciplines and courses.

Turn over a New Leaf!
Ruthie Maslin
Madison County Public Library

In February 2013, Madison County Public Library launched the New Leaf Campaign to challenge staff to 30 days of positive changes. Each day of the program, staff members were encouraged to do one thing to improve their health and happiness, from skipping a smoke break or getting a manicure, to trying a new hobby or volunteering in the community. Discover what happened!

Public Libraries Leading the Charge Toward School Readiness: Counting Down to Kindergarten as a Community
Lynn Baker
Paul Sawyler Public Library

School readiness screening data from the 2012-2013 school year shows that less than one-third of incoming kindergarten students in Kentucky are academically ready for school. Public libraries are in the perfect position for leading their communities toward school readiness. In this program, public library youth services specialist and former preschool/ kindergarten teacher, Lynn Baker, will offer proven strategies for developing school readiness programs that involve the entire community.

Looking Forward-Reaching Back: Beginning African American Genealogical Research
Nancy Richey
Special Collections-WKU
Allison Day
Special Collections-WKU

A recent Pew survey noted that African-americans are especially tied to their libraries and are eager to see new services and research resources and want help from their local librarian. Genealogical research is gaining popularity within these communities and librarians on the front lines should be able to assist these patrons. As this can be particularly challenging, this presentation focuses on basic techniques and resources that will enable librarians to meet this challenge.

3:00 – 3:50 pm
Increasing Diversity in the Profession: What Works?
Judy Sackett
University of Kentucky Libraries

Library leaders and professional organizations have for some time viewed increased diversity in the library profession as a positive goal. However, the ALA Office for Research & Statistics reports that fewer than 12% of ALA members responding to a 2012 demographic survey self-selected their race/family origin as non-White. This program will look at the various strategies being employed to increase diversity in the library profession and to assess the success of those efforts.

Elissa Richardson
Hutchins Library, Berea College

Berea College offers unique leadership and management opportunities to undergraduate student workers through its labor program. With a mixture of anecdotes and practical how-to tips, this program will review ways in which undergrads have successfully served in a supervisory capacity alongside faculty and staff in the daily operations of a busy library. Included will be tips regarding creating meaningful special projects, managing conflict, and effective training techniques.

“A Joke is a Very Serious Thing”: Using Humor in Library Instruction
Linda Sizemore
Eastern Kentucky University Libraries
Ashley Cole
Eastern Kentucky University Libraries

This interactive presentation will describe the biology behind humor, when to use humor, and the importance of it in communicating information literacy to students, faculty, and EVERYONE. As facilitators of learning, librarians can use humor as a teaching tool to reduce library anxiety and to increase creative thinking. Participants will learn techniques and share methods in order to gain an understanding that humor is a skill that must be cultivated. “Wit punctures, humor pictures.

Genealogy Literacy: Providing Reference Services to a Patron Group in Transition
Cheri Daniels
Kentucky Historical Society

As technology continues to change reference services, the genealogist and family historian patron group can provide even greater challenges due to their unique research needs and transitioning demographic. This session will explore their information seeking trends, their technological challenges, and how the application of information literacy-type standards to your genealogy reference services can help them navigate through the instant gratification hype towards sound research methods.

Branding on a Budget
Julie Howe
Somerset Community College

Recent Pew study results indicate that many patrons still recognize libraries as institutions of lending and computer services, but fail to recognize other fundamental services. Proper branding and marketing of services can lead to better patron understanding and in turn, increase foot traffic and usage statistics. Effective branding includes covering three areas: in-house, virtual, and physical presentation, as well as one critical and overlooked aspect of brand-building in libraries.

Dig Into Summer Reading
Heather Dieffenbach
Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives

Reading logs and posters. Face painters and animal shows. Prizes and kick-off parties. A lot of things, included staff time and money, go into your library’s Summer Reading Program. We get so caught up in the million different things we have to do for Summer Reading that we rarely get a chance to just sit down and think about why we are doing it—and how we can use it to make the greatest impact on our communities. In this session we will talk about the benefits of public library summer read.

How to Float? Louisville Implements Floating Collections- You Can Too!
Debbie Oberhausen
Louisville Free Public Library

Louisville Free Public Library jumped in the water to see if they could float? They had been swimming along as 18 locations sharing resources but what if they allowed those resources to stay where they landed. Will they finally have one collection for the entire system? The process included changes: cataloging, labeling, ILS settings, physical space, etc. They started November 1, 2012 with a gradual process and evaluation is ongoing. Will it work for your multi-branch system?

Brad Marcum
Eastern Kentucky University, Crabbe Library

Do you ever long for access to that great education resource you used in college? Or just wish there was an easy way to keep up with all the best electronic, education-related resources available to you? Come learn about a new, education-specific professional development portal for on-the-job K-12 educators and school media specialists, developed through a partnership between EKU Librarians and KYVL. Though created with the goal of allowing and encouraging alumni of EKU’s College of Education to continue to access quality, library-vetted resources after graduation, this portal is readily and freely accessible to Kentucky teaching professionals of all sorts at any point in their careers. It is a “living” site which is updated frequently by librarians but which is constantly informed by suggestions and recommendations from those in the field, and which includes links and instructions on accessing peer-reviewed education journals and other popular publications, links to useful databases, and links to free, reliable websites specific to the field. Come and check out all that this great resource has to offer and spread the word to your librarian and teacher colleagues.

Making Collaboration Work

Kim Phillips
Central Elementary School
Beth Kerrick
Marshall County Public Library

We will share how the Marshall County Public Library, the Central Elementary School Library and the Family Resource Center worked together to create a summer reading program. We wanted to increase the use of the library throughout the summer and for the students to continue reading during the summer to help prevent the “summer slide.” We will share how we promoted our program prior to summer break, the incentives we used and our results.

Birds of Feather?: Comparing a “traditional” to a self-paced online course

Perry Bratcher
Northern Kentucky University

Do students utilize different online courses in different ways or are they consistent from semester to semester and course to course? This poster session will compare two disparate online courses - one for the ALA certification program and another for the Bachelor of Library Informatics at Northern Kentucky University. Statistics will compare usage of the courses from various semesters and summaries of the similarities and differences of usage will be presented. Librarians can use this information for consideration in designing their own courses or for insight into student usage of online courses.

Muslim Journeys Bridging Cultures Grant

Sandy Sumner
Morehead State University Camden-Carroll Library

Morehead State University’s Camden-Carroll Library is one of 842 libraries in the United States, and 6 institutions in Kentucky to win the Muslim Journeys Bridging Cultures Bookshelf grant. The bookshelf grant consists of 25 books and 3 DVDs on Muslim and Islamic culture to help educate and promote acceptance of diversity. This session will talk about the collaborative partners the library reached out to, the programming ideas submitted and current progress on fulfilling the grant. Let our journey and experience encourage you to apply for the next Bridging Cultures grant.

Coming Together: Children’s Literature and KCAS

Jackie Guthrie, Kerrick Elementary School Library
Dr. Paul Lanata, Jefferson County Public Schools
Brent Downs, Jefferson County Public Schools
Sarah O’Hair, Jefferson County Public Schools

Teachers and librarians must integrate children’s literature into the common core now more than ever. See the LibGuide developed by Jefferson County Public School librarians to meet the need for engaging children’s literature aligned to Kentucky Core Academic Standards.

Making Sense of the Common Core Document in School Libraries

Carolyn Reid,
Pendleton County Schools

We are told that we need to be familiar with the Common Core and how it is used, but several are confused by the document itself. In this poster session, you can hear about the document’s layout, and we will highlight the standards that are geared toward reading, research, and tech.
What Do You Geek?
Les Lehman
Jessamine County Public Library

Library usage continues to rise at the same time as public libraries struggle to maintain and increase funding. Geek the Library can help! This simple, but effective, community awareness campaign changes ‘geek’ from a noun to a verb and asks: What do you geek? What the community is passionate about helps connect them to the library. Geek the Library takes a light hearted approach to a serious message, and helps U.S. public libraries create awareness, generate engagement and encourage action. It’s is free, flexible and customizable. In fact, every campaign is unique. OCLC provides the tools to help library leadership and staff actively engage with the community and start local conversations—creating both internal and external library advocates.

The $100 Library PC: Using the Raspberry Pi for Customer Access and Engagement
Michael Wells
Northern Kentucky University

As we enter the “Post PC Era” many libraries are shifting budget allocations to purchase and support Discovery Systems and New ILS’s. In this shift, it is still important to remember that customers who use the physical library deserve functional computing resources that do not show the signs of neglect or age. This poster session seeks to show the potential of the single board, low cost PC, called the “Raspberry Pi”. Running Raspian Linux, this fully functional computer comes in at a price of just over $100 and might fit the needs for a library hoping to replace aging computers that are used for internet access, word processing, or other basic operations. Though not perfect for every library, the Pi platform can also be an entry point to engage in conversations relating to the “maker community” movement. Because of the Pi’s various potential uses aside from being a client PC, libraries can utilize this platform to engage in learning workshops with library customers, and to even teach coding or other technical applications.

The Game’s Afoot!: Steps in the Development of an Online Interactive Game About Library Resources
Belinda Yff
Sullivan University Library

Plato stated that, “study forced on the mind will not abide there….Train your children in their studies not by compulsion but by games.” According to gamification expert, Jane McGonigal (Reality is broken : why games make us better and how they can change the world: 2011), games are a way for academic libraries to provide information that is fun and engaging. Also, famed Hungarian psychologist Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi’s theory of “flow,” viz.; that people are happiest when they are in a state of flow—a state of concentration or complete absorption with the activity at hand and the situation, postulates games as a means of attaining “flow.” This poster session describes the methodology used by the Sullivan University Library in the creation of an online, interactive game. The Library Mystery Game encourages students to use various features of the library’s website to answer a series of clues. As each clue is solved, the student gets closer to solving the mystery (the “disappearance” of an instructor), as well as learning more about what is available on the library website. Don’t worry, there is a happy ending! This poster session will reveal procedures and tools used in the creation of the game.

Understanding Faculty Attitudes About the Library: Analyzing Qualitative Survey Data
Maurini Strub
University of Louisville

In 2012, the University of Louisville Libraries, in conjunction with the Office of Institutional Planning and Research, conducted a survey to measure its populations’ usage of and attitudes about the libraries and its services. The faculty survey had a response rate of just under 23% of the targeted population and over 90% of those respondents supplied comments that needed to be analyzed. Borrowing from contextual inquiry methodology, our Assessment & Resource Planning Team utilized affinity diagramming to sift through approximately 700 comments, and to help reveal emerging themes. We will share an overview of the technique of affinity diagramming, and what we discovered. In conjunction with findings from other undergraduate and graduate populations, this will provide the basis for recommendations for ways that the libraries can make itself more valuable to their communities.

Connecting Maker Spaces and STEM @ your School Library!
Cynthia Houston
Western Kentucky University

As school librarians consider the changing landscape of their spaces, they should consider becoming players in the Maker movement, as there a number of ways libraries can participate in these library or community-based activities. This presentation will provide an overview of the Maker movement in the United States and describe school libraries’ levels of involvement in at the following levels:
Level 1: School library collection development supporting the Maker movement as part of STEM initiatives and the school curriculum.
Level 2: School library outreach to community Makerspaces
Level 3: Maker Programming in school libraries
As part of this presentation, challenges and opportunities for school libraries to consider when planning their involvement, such as collection development policies, liability, technical expertise, personnel, budget and equipment will be considered. A brief discussion of key resources related to STEM and Makerspaces will also be presented.

Radical Change Agents in the Library: Will the Sky Fall?
Johan Koren
Murray State University

According to R. David Lankes, “the mission of Librarians is to improve society through facilitating knowledge creation in their communities.” This describes exactly the mission of the school librarian. Knowledge creation comes through learning, and learning comes from conversation, an exchange of language, ideas, and concepts that leads to new language, ideas and concepts. Lankes calls this participatory librarianship “new librarianship” and the professionals who pursue it “radical change agents.” But is it really that new—but, more important, is it really you? Are you radical enough?

Five Aggressive Approaches to Help You Thrive at Library Promotion
Laura Miller
Credo Reference

You have the best of the best resources but, to paraphrase Ranganathan, what's the point if they're not being used? This session focuses on what works when it comes to communicating what's available to your students through your library. It features examples from promotional campaigns run by school libraries as well as applicable takeaways from larger scale campaigns run by colleges, universities and public libraries. Come with questions about communicating with your students and leave with five key points to apply when developing and running your next library promotion project.

9:30 - 10:30 am
Audrey Church, Associate Professor and Coordinator of the School Library Media Program
Longwood University

What are best practices in 21st century school libraries? What should you be doing to empower learners to become “critical thinkers, enthusiastic readers, skillful researchers, and ethical users of information”? Let’s find out what the research says and explore practical applications! [OR We'll find out what the research says and explore practical applications!]

School Libraries and Disaster to Recovery: Be a Prepper!
Andrea Paganelli
Western Kentucky University

More and more frequently we see natural disasters destroying communities and the school libraries that serve them. How should we as librarians be preparing for the possibility of disaster? This presentation will include three distinct sections to cultivate awareness of the need for preparation and direction for planning.
1. The process of disaster planning including tips for how to cultivate collaborative partnerships that aid policies already in place at the national and local level.
2. The school library disaster experience communicated as a personal narrative with practical advice for the immediate challenges of implementing library disaster triage.
3. The recovery process: it is not a sprint, it is a marathon. Have you been training to create solutions? It is easy to think that your community and school library will never experience disaster. I felt the same until April 27th, 2011. Come and learn more about disaster preparation. Be a prepper for your community and library.
Infographics: Visual Communication for the 21st Century
Rebecca Schlafer
Westport Middle School

An Infographic is a visual representation of factual information. Infographics have been around for years, but the cultural shift towards social media interaction and new computer programs that make creating infographics easier have resulted in an explosion of information being represented visually. What does an increase in the presence of infographics in online media and in popular culture mean for our students? How can students navigate an infographic to obtain necessary information or determine fact from fiction? How can teachers use infographics to teach student content? How can student generated infographics reflect inquiry based learning? This interactive presentation will allow teachers and librarians to discover how infographics can strengthen their practice and enhance student learning. Attendees will be given the chance to explore non-fiction texts that feature infographics, analyze infographics that explain educational and cultural concepts and finally attendees will observe videos of students creating their own infographics with discussion to follow.

Principals’ Perceptions of the Instructional Role of the School Librarian
Audrey Church, Associate Professor and Coordinator of the School Media Program
Longwood University

Do principals know that we are teachers, instructional partners, information specialists, and leaders within our schools? Do they know that when we take an active role in the instructional programs of our schools, student achievement is higher? How do principals learn about what school librarians do? What do they expect from us? In this session, the presenter will share findings from her research with elementary and secondary school principals.

Let KYVL Help Prepare Your Students for College!
Betsy Hughes
KY Virtual Library

Whether your students are heading for a STEM profession or underwater basket weaving, they’ll be asked to do research sometime during their postsecondary degree. Using KYVL resources now can give them a head start later. This session will introduce KYVL’s new search interface and provide an overview of the KYVL databases and interfaces targeted to grades 6-12. We’ll also highlight some specific resources to share with teachers.
E-books Direct-Unlimited, Simultaneous Usage
Presenter: Mike Howard, Mike Howard Library Services

Web-based e-books direct from the most popular publishers to support the Common Core standards. E-books delivered in the simplest, most effective manner to engage students and support classrooms.

There’s a Zoo in the Library!
Presenter: Latisha Cardwell, Butler County Middle School

Zooburst is a digital 3D augmented reality pop-up book that can be used to present knowledge in various subject areas or to write a self-created digital story. Explanation and demonstration will be given on how to invite collaboration in multiple subject areas using Zooburst software as a technology and research project. Research skills lesson ideas and materials will be shared. Technology lesson ideas from how to use flashdrives to creating hyperlinks to video downloaded from Encyclomedia into Zooburst will be discussed. If your students are ready for something different from power points, prezis, brochures, etc., this is software that will renew curiosity, inspire creativity, engage learning, and strengthen technology skills. BYOD to try out Zooburst during the session. And, yes, there was a zoo in our library as the culminating event to the animal habitat Zooburst books that were created in two science classes, using student-created animals with Zooburst Code tags (comparable to QR Codes)!

Folktales, Fables, Myths, and More
Presenter: Mary Hamilton, Kentucky Story Telling Association

Folktales, fables, myths, and more – Expand your knowledge of traditional literature in this session that examines the defining characteristics of different genres. Why? Common Core Reading Standards for Literature specify that students are expected to recount/retell stories, including fables, folktales, myths, and traditional literature from different cultures. The more you know about various genres of traditional literature, the better you will be able to collaborate and communicate with your teachers to help your students learn to retell traditional stories, create new stories, and use this literature to meet additional Common Core Standards.

Saturday September 14, 2013 Continued

Saturday, 3:00-3:45
Great Reads for Teens
Presenter: Terri Grief, McCracken County High School

Terri reads 100 books per year and shares them with you at the Fall Conference. Come hear this rapid fire session and leave with a list of books for the new school year.

Give the Little Ones a Leg Up with KYVL Resources!
Presenters: Betsy Hughes and Enid Wohlstein, KY Virtual Library

The Kentucky Core Academic Standards for English and Language Arts ask that students begin doing research as early as second grade. Why not make their task easier by directing them to KYVL? This session will provide an overview of the KYVL databases and interfaces targeted to grades K-6, as well as some specific resources to share with teachers.

Energizing your school with NEW KET Resources!
